

Healing Pets with Reiki

Pets, animals and plants also have universal life energy and can be healed and/or revitalized with Reiki. Many times animals in need of healing will “hang around you” because they sense you can help them. Commitment and patience is needed on your part. Allow the animal to become comfortable and work around it. Sometimes on your lap if the animal is willing. In an emergency situation calm the animal first with a reassuring voice and gently stroke its crown (head) chakra. Having someone familiar with the animal to assist can be beneficial. When working with birds, be sure the wings are folded against the body in a very natural position. Be sure not to hold the bird too tightly. Second degree Reiki distance healing is ideal for healing wild animals as there is no need to touch.

Animals feel energy much more intensely than people do and some of them will not allow a Reiki treatment. As with people, not all animals can (or desire to) be restored to physical health. Animals have free will and will not accept energy that would thwart their situation. You need to realize, if it's terminal, it is something that is going to happen no matter if Reiki is done or not. But showing compassion to an animal can hardly be viewed as failure, regardless of the final outcome. Each effort by man to restore kindness and caring toward the animal kingdom is a contribution toward the healing of the planet.
